

United Professional Horsemen's Association, Inc.

Dear UPHA Members,

Hope everyone made it home safely from Las Vegas—

The past few years have brought challenges to our industry, but this conference reminded me just how strong we are when we come together. UPHA has worked hard to stay united, and in Las Vegas, it was clear that unity is growing. While we may have different perspectives, our shared dedication to our horses and our profession always brings us back together.

This year's conference wasn't about a checklist of accomplishments. It was about our people and our horses.

Throughout the week, the camaraderie among horse trainers was unmistakable. Trainers supported one another, shared ideas, and took the time to truly connect. New relationships were formed, old friendships were strengthened, and there was a genuine sense that we are better when we work together.

Our forums were well attended, educational, and full of thoughtful discussion. The energy of our young professionals was especially encouraging, fostering an atmosphere of inclusion, collaboration, and optimism for the future.

And of course, we can't forget the fun—our night at the Sphere for The Wizard of Oz was a shared experience that brought excitement to an already memorable week.

I left Las Vegas feeling proud of our membership and confident in the direction we are heading. We look forward to reconnecting in 2027 in Orlando and hope to see members from across the country join us as we continue moving our industry forward—together.

Sincerely,

Paul Boone
